ROOSEVELT AND FAIRBANKS

Nominated This Afternoon at Chicago by the Republican National Convention. The Work Completed.

THE USUAL CONVENTION SCENES

Roosevelt Receives Every Vote in the Convention and Fairbanks is Nominated With Like Unanimity. Ex-Governor Black Places Roosevelt in Nomination. The Speech in Full. Many Speeches Seconding the Nomination. The Proceedings of the Day in Detail. Much Enthusiasm is Manifested. The Program For The Convention Has Been Carried Out to The Letter.

Chicago, June 23.—It was reported that the national convention of the Republican party would meet at ten o'clock with the expectation of nominating the candidates and adjourning in time for the afternoon trains. The Coliseum began to fill at nine o'clock with thousands who are permitted to hear the oratory.

The nomination of candidates in the convention is the feature that appeals most strongly to the public, and the number of visitors this morning gave ample evidence of that fact. Half an hour before the time for the opening of the convention there were as many visitors in the galleries as witnessed the entire opening session of Tuesday. Not only at the opening of the convention have all the visitors seats been filled, but the manner in which the crowd poured through the entrances today gave evidence that by the time the gavel fell every seat would be taken.

There was some delay in calling the convention to order to give time for the preparation of some resolutions which are to be presented, and it was 10:30 when the chairman's gavel fell.

Rev. Thomas E. Snively offered prayer today. After some announcements the chairman announced that the next order of business would be the roll call by states for nominations for President of the United States. The clerk called the name of Alabama, and immediately the chairman of that delegation mounted his chair and said that Alabama had the honor of yielding its place on the roll call to New York. Instantly the convention was in an uproar shouting wildly and waving flags.

Ex-Governor Frank Black immediately mounted the platform and in a few words was introduced by Chairman Cannon. Governor Black's voice though not heavy, carried well and increased in volume as he got fairly under way. His epigrams provoked laughter and his sharply turned sentences never failed to raise a ripple of applause. Black pronounced the nominating words at just 11:05, and as he did so he retired quickly from the platform. (His speech will be found in another place in this paper.)

When Governor Black concluded occurred the greatest demonstration yet seen at the convention. Ten thousand people were on their feet cheering and waving flags. Chairman Cannon unfurled a tattered silk flag and advancing to the edge of the platform began waving it. It was the same flag used when Lincoln was nominated, and added fuel to the flame of enthusiasm. The front of the stage was next given up to J. Henry Smythe, Jr., with a megaphone and a flag. As he swung the flag from side to side he shouted the name of Roosevelt. The shout was soon taken up by the delegates, and in a twinkling the whole assemblage was shouting, "Roosevelt, Roosevelt," in measured union.

The Indiana delegation sprang open umbrellas of red, white and blue, bearing portraits of Roosevelt and Fairbanks. The other delegations waved their special emblems: The New York delegation started out on a marching tour around the hall. The demonstrations continued 23 minutes before Chairman Cannon tried to secure order. It was then five minutes more before the convention quieted down enough for him to make himself heard.

Senator Beveridge of Indiana was then recognized. In seconding the nomination Senator Beveridge spoke with force and increasing enthusiasm, emphasizing his points with graceful gestures. The Senator's voice was probably the easiest heard of any speaker which the convention had heard. Shouts, cheers and cat calls resounded through the hall when he sarcastically said: "No mystery was ever elected president and never will be."

Beveridge's concluding words, "Indiana seconds the nomination of Roosevelt," released the waiting flags and cheers. It was short lived enthusiasm, however, and order was soon restored. G. A. Knight of California followed.

Knight proved to be a phrase maker. "Cowardice, duplicity and dishonesty are not impulsive," shouted he. "Theodore Roosevelt is impulsive. He hypnotizes obstacles."

Stillwell Edwards was the next speaker. Edwards' speech was eminently satisfactory, and he was frequently interrupted with applause. The chair next recognized Governor Bradley of Kentucky. His announcement that the Democratic party had abandoned their Moses and could not find their Joshua was met with loud applause. Joseph Cotton of Minnesota was the next speaker called upon. He was one speaker whose voice could be heard in the remotest corner of the hall, and for this reason he was cheered by the galleries repeatedly.

He was followed by Cummings, the colored delegate from Maryland, who made the last seconding speech for Roosevelt. (This speech in full is given on another page.)

A real ovation was given Cummings when he closed.

At 1:09 p. m., Chairman Cannon announced the roll call for president. When Alabama responded with her entire vote for Roosevelt there were cheers. As each state responded, "Theodore Roosevelt" the cheers were repeated. Chairman Cannon at the conclusion of the roll call announced that Theodore Roosevelt had received the entire vote of the convention, 994, and it only remained to announce his nomination for the presidency by the Republican party. The enthusiasm which followed this announcement was much briefer than that which followed the first placing of his name before the convention.

The chairman then ordered the call of states for nominations for vice president. Alabama gave way again, this time to Iowa, and Senator Dolliver delivered the first nominating speech for Senator Fairbanks of Indiana. The first mention of Fairbanks' name was the signal for cheers which were repeated when Dolliver formally presented the name of the Indiana senator. When the applause subsided Senator Depew was recognized. Senator Forsaker followed Depew. Governor Pennypacker of Pennsylvania was next recognized by the chairman.

REPORT CONFIRMED.

French and German Ministers Attacked in Hayti.

Washington, June 23.—Confirmation of the reported attack on the French and German ministers in Hayti came to the state department today from Minister Howell at Port au Prince dated yesterday. He says, "The French and German ministers with their ladies while passing the palace in their carriages yesterday were stoned by the palace guards. The French minister was slightly injured. An apology was demanded but not given. It is understood the attack was the outgrowth of the Haytian bank trouble which involved the incarceration of the Haytian government of certain foreign officers of the bank on the charge of misappropriation of the funds, and the subsequent intervention of the French and German governments in behalf of their citizens."

MINER FOUND DEAD.

Was One of the Men Deported From Colorado to New Mexico.

Denver, Colo., June 23.—Emil Johnson, a miner who was deported from Cripple Creek and carried to the New Mexico line by the militia, was found dead in a room on Laramie street at nine o'clock this morning by his brother John T. Johnson of this city. His death was due to suffocation, and a current of gas escaping from a jet in the room showed the cause. Johnson was a prominent member of the Western Federation of Miners, and was forced to leave the district without saying good bye to his wife and four children whom he left practically penniless. It is believed that this preyed on his mind and was the cause of his suicide, although his brother thinks the cause of his death was an accident.

Big Battle Soon.

St. Petersburg, June 23.—The expectation of a great battle has been intensified by General Kuropatkin's speech to General Stackelberg's corps on Monday at Kai Chou, when the commander in chief said he would see the troops again soon, that they must settle the Japanese soon, and that they were not going home until this had been done. The general is understood to have meant that he would return from Liao Yang with a large force and give battle.

The Record Team Victorious.

The match game of bowling last night between the Record team and a picked team of the Champions of New Mexico resulted in a victory for the Record team by a close score. There were three games, and the first game resulted in a tie, the score being 545 each. The Record boys won the second game by twenty pins and the third game by thirteen pins making thirty-three pins ahead of the Champions.

The game was for the lightweight championship of the world and a box of the celebrated Owl cigars. The Record boys walked off victoriously puffing Owl like smokestacks, and the former champions were the picture of abject misery. The cigar were passed around, however.

Baptist Meeting Continues.

Last night to a packed house Rev. Burkett delivered a discourse of great power on "The Peace Which Shall be as the Waves of the Sea." The membership shows a loyalty in attendance at both morning and evening services.

Willie Day Married.

The following account of Miss Willie Mabel, daughter of Mrs. Joseph C. Lea of this city and Mr. James Thomas Padgett of Dallas, Texas appears in the June 18th issue of Beau Monde, a weekly journal devoted to music, art society and current gossip published at Dallas.

A beautiful wedding as well as a notable alliance, was that of Miss Willie Mabel Day, daughter of Mrs. J. C. Lea and Mr. James Thomas Padgett, third son of Mr. William C. Padgett, all prominent Dallasites, which was celebrated at the First Methodist Church, and Mrs. Lea's east Dallas home on Wednesday evening. Beau Monde announced this wedding some weeks ago, since when, the many friends of this popular young couple have been on the tip-toe of interest, and elaborate preparations have been taking place, all of which were brought to such a beautiful consummation on Wednesday. The bride is one of the greatest heiresses in her own right in the state, and, better still, a young lady richly endowed with those qualities of mind and heart that makes woman God's greatest gift to man. The groom is in every way eligible to so pretty and rich a bride—being the son of one of Dallas' oldest and most influential citizens, and a young man of irreproachable character and fine business attainments. The ceremony was set for eight o'clock, and after the various attendants came the matron of honor, who was none other than the groom's mother, looking handsome in a hand shirred and tucked robe of white crepe de Paris, trimmed in Duchess lace, with a coronet brooch of diamonds flashing in the laces of her corsage and a diamond aigrette in her hair. Next came the maid of honor, Miss Bess Vantis of Brownwood, wearing a gown of Paris muslin, over taffeta and filmy with dainty lace and carrying a great shower cluster of white carnations. Then came a trio of little girls, Annie Cockrell, Fairfax Nesbitt and Helen Louise Eberly, in puffed skirts and fluttering ribbons, and carrying tiny baskets of sweet peas in which was imbedded the wedding ring; and then the bride on the arm of her handsome mother. She was beautifully robed in an imported creation of white chiffon embroidered with delicate threads of silver and embellished with rose point lace, and hung over a princess train of taffeta and chiffon. Her veil was caught with a coronet of orange blossoms that had been worn by her mother, and she carried a great round bouquet of half blown white roses and valley lilies. Her only ornament was a chain bracelet with the links imbedded with diamonds—the gift of the groom. Mrs. Lea wore a rich black embroidered crepe de sole with some fine diamonds and rare old lace as garniture. The groom was attended by his brother, Charles W. Padgett, as best man, and he and all his men were en regie in evening dress, wearing the bride's chosen flower. After the ceremony, Mrs. Leavenworth her home on Worth street in a large reception.

The bride's trousseau is possibly one of the handsomest and most complete put out this season—she leaving in a Redfern modeled gown and hat. The wedding trip will include a two weeks' stay at Mackinac Island, for which resort they will sail from Chicago after a glimpse at the St. Louis fair. Later they will go by water to New York and then take the St. Lawrence river trip, which is always ideal at this season of the year. After September first they will be at home at 309 Worth street.

G. W. Reilly, Jr., of Wichita, Kansas, has decided to make his future headquarters in Roswell. He came here several days ago to visit his brother E. A. Reilly, and he was so favorably impressed that he took a desert claim below the city. He is a commercial traveler.
